2- ESSENTIAL NOTES AND EXPRESSIONS

There exist two different weapons of mass destruction:

- A-bombs using nuclear fission
- H-bombs using thermonuclear energy.

Only two nuclear weapons have been used in history. They caused the immediate deaths of about 120,000 people. Today eight countries in the world have acknowledged possession of nuclear weapons. Those countries are:

The USA, Russia, the United Kingdom, France, China, India, Pakistan and Nord Korea.

The concept of Mutual assured destruction was a doctrine of military strategy applied in a period of the cold war by NATO. In a certain way it ensured peace between the United States and Russia because both of them had the force to destroy the other.

States which are threatening to the world's peace are also called rogue states. The term was first used by the United States. Today Iran, North Korea, Iraq, Afghanistan, Libya and Syria have are sometimes considered rogue states.

They should be distinguished from the so-called pariah states such as Myanmar (Burma), Sudan or Zimbabwe which are known to be authoritarian regimes but do not represent a global threat.
